Last week, Labor sealed a political deal to stitch up the environment vote with the Greens

From the minute that Labor stitched up a political deal with the Greens, Labor thought that the environment issue was over.

But the environment is more important than a political deal. And if Labor wins big at this election, there will be no real pressure for them to really come good on the environment.

So if you are genuinely concerned about the environment, you'll need to send a message about the political preference deal Labor did with the Greens.

You'll need to put your local Liberal candidate before Labor.

This election keep Labor under control on the environment. Put Liberal before Labor.
